Statement of historical significance and description of property:

B108

This large rectangular two-story log cabin was built from trees on the property. The front has been replaced following a fire in 1969. It includes an open porch. Rear corners show notched cross-log construction. Front corners terminate in vertical corner post. The gable siding consists of vertical cross-cut logs end to end. The roof is medium gable, with exposed purlins and wide eaves. An end chimney passes through the eaves. The house is well set back, in a 4-acres plot.

There is a very dilapidated barn out back.
